History of a Tiger Cat-Singular Additions

Mistory of a Tiger Cat—Singular Additions in Natural History.

At a late marting of the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Science, the following interesting statement was made:

Dr. Joseph Wilson, (Surgeon United States Navy.) related that he had in his possession, during some months, on board the United States this Vendalia, a female whele of a small Occiot. (Felix paradits minimus.) commonly called "tiger-cat." It was obtained at Realejo, Nicaragua, in the month of December, IESS. At that time it was too young to eat anything except milk, but gradually came to eat crumbs of bread from her cup, and small scraps of meat. The animal was light gray, beautifully marked with dark elliptical rings and spots, light underneath, his ears quite thort, rounded, with a lunated white spot on top; the tail about the length of the body and nearly black. She was of the size of an ordinary cat, and weighed five pounds eight ounces when ten months old. She was transferred to the Doctor's protection in March, 1859, when her age was conjectured to cight onness when ten months old. She was transforred to the Doctor's protection in March, 1859, when her age was conjectured to be four months. She was named Miss Tiger by acclaimation, and became reconciled to her change of abode much more readily than I was prepared to expect.

The Fandalia was miserably infested by rais, and in the course of a few hours she received her first lesson in the valuable accomplianment of catching them. A young rat was eaught in a trap and presented to her attention, she besitated but a moment, when she commenced struggling to get at it, and when permitted she pounced upon it with great ferceness; she walked about growling with fiver prize, evidently proud of the conquest. She afterward played with it for about three hours, performing many fantastic tricks in the way of tossing it up and catching it came down, turning somersaults and rolling over with it in her paws. After this she seemed quite at home, and required no more fessons in rat-catching, though she eventually became very expert. It occased his Tiger was immediately called upon and carried to the scene of action. She generally pointed ont by her actions the locality of the object of pursuit, and stood ready to pounce upon it at the very first opportunity. On these occasions she sometimes made tremendously long bounds, say ten feet. Escapes in these cases were very rare.

She sventually came to understand this business so well, that when called she would run out and axhibit an eagerness to be picked up and carried, comparable to that of a child pursue and active, and for substitute the structure of the second of the consultation of the consultation

Escapes in these cases were very rare.

She sventually came to understand this business so well, that when called she would run out and exhibit an eagerness to be picked up and carried, comparable to that of a child which expects to be lifted into a carriage. In attacking rats she was quite fearless, and so far as known was never hurt by them. She mostly seized them by the back of the neck or head, but was not all particular if these parts did not happen to be the first in her reach. She soon crushed the skull by forcing her long cuspid teeth through it, generally killing her prey so quickly that it was not even heard to squeal. After playing with it a molerate time, she would eat it, commencing with the head and progressing steadily till she finished with the end of the tail, only stopping a moment to lick her chops, when ashe came to the heart or other tit bit. Imagining that the hair and hide were not very good food for her, I once partially skinned one that she might learn to tear off the skin and leave it but this was labor lost, as she immediately began to eat the skin, hair and all, in preference to the other part.

Rats were sometimes taken from her and thrown overboard, as she occasionally caught more than she could manage to cat; but she soon began to show her disapprobation of this measure by a very startling, fierce and threatening growl. The first occasion it waked me up at about midnight, and when I went out to inquire what was wrong with Miss Tiger, I found her sitting near a big rat and growling in a very unusual and startling manner at about six men whom she had driven from their beds by her threatening. They were standing around her with various weapons in their hands, but there was very little prospect of moving her without some severe bites and scratches. As I approached a little nearer than the reat, she showed a disposition to take her prize in her mouth, and while her teeth were thus employed I caught her by the top of her shoulders, and she permitted me, without the least resistance to c carry her off, rat and all, to a place on deck, where her growling could not disturb the where her growling could not disturb the sleepers.

She was frequently carried off in this manner afterward, both by myself and by others. She would sit by the hour, very quietly, near her property, till she was disturbed by some covement near her, when she would commence with her threatening growl, which was loud enough and fierce enough to make the firmest stand back, till they had seen and reflected on the state of affairs. She had another gentle, plaintive growl, which she used in calling for her breakfast and on showing dissatisfaction on ordinany slight occasions. She had no cry which could be compared to the mewing of a cat, but she could purr to perfection when in search of a warm bed. Her favorite food was rare beefsteak, which she even preferred to rate; but hunger and petting eventually induced her to cat bread and butter for her breakfast, whenever she had a night of unsuccessful hunting.

whenever she had a night of unsuccessful hunting.

The gentleness of this pet was really astonishing. She allowed herself to be picked up by anybody, without any worse mark of disastisfaction than a little growling. Even when feeding, and under apprehension that her rat was about to be taken from her, she would not bite nor scratch. She would play with a handkercelef much in the same manner as with a rat. She was fond of being handled, and when robbed with the hand she would roll about on her back and pretendshe was going to bite, seising the lingers between her teeth, growling and biting with such cautious gentleness is not to be in any danger of wounding the skin. But one exception to this occurred; one of the officers attempted to play with her in this manner with kid gloves on, and was immediately punished for his fopperty by having her long teeth instantly forced through both his glove and his finger.

She may have perceived some difference between the texture of the gloves and that of the flagers on which she was accustomed to try her teeth. She knew very well where to find warm sleeping places. She would for this purpose risk the happened to factly by purpose risk the happened to factly by patting ham gently on the face with her past. If encouraged and welcomed by a pat on the back or top of the head, she would lie down either against his breast or at his feet; but if refused, by one of two very gentle boxes on the sar, she would retire with a discontented growt and seek a more hospitable sleeper. How she learned to distinguish between the tape on the bead at marks of the sleeper. How she learned to distinguish between the tape on the bead at marks of herself up in this position for her morning map.

On one occasion it was noticed that she had a large tumor on the side of her face and a large abscess formed. It was at first supposed that she had hurt her face in playing with a cattiskr, some one, however noticed that it proceeded from an irregularity in shedding one of the milk teeth. One of the officers, of uncommon zeal in such matters proposed to hold her while the obnoxious tooth was extracted. I determined to gratify him in this matter, and to the astonisment of all he held Miss Tiger on his lap while I extracted the obnoxious tooth with a pair of forcess, and neither of us were scratched during the operation.

She was fond of dark places, and delighted in running about deck and up the rigging, early in the mornings and on cloudy days.

When the men were called aloft to furl 'top-gallant sails, she would jump to the shrouds and have a race with them up the rigging, and with very little effort she was "first man in the top."

She generally showed so much excitement in the presence of birds, that doubtless her instinct would lead her to seize them. She killed three or four chickens, at different time, secretly, and off Cape Horn she seized and killed an alabatross of at least double her weight. A common green parrot was at one time on board and she was exceedingly caper to get at it, but she was boxed a little on the ears and her head turned the other away a few times, till she appeared to understand that it was not for her. Subsequently, when the appeared to be watching it too intently, she was boxed a little and driven, till in about a week she seemed to regard it as one of the family.

In the beginning of December we were

In the beginning of December we were passing the West India Islands, the ship in her course, starting flocks of flying fish, in which Miss Tiger became interested, they looked so much like birds, She was observed in the moonlight watching them very in-tently. Her absence was noticed at break-fast. A search through the ship made it cer-tain that she had been lost overboard during

The Proprietors of the DAILY PRESS offer to the | Real Estate, Note and Bill Broker, ublic a complete newspaper, into which more matter is condensed than is contained in some dellies of much greater pretensions in size, and which they furnish at a price that brings it within the reach of BUSINESS PAPER CASHED AT A FEW every man and woman in Cincinnati, who are able to Money Loaned on Collateral Se-other papers of this city or of any other city, and the judgment of our readers whether we do not furnish a paper equally attractive at one-half, or less than half the cost of the other Cincinnati dailies.

THE DAILT PRESS, since it came under the present auagement, has increased rapidly in circulation and has now probably as large a circulation within the city of Cincinnati as any other journal, and is increasing at a rate equal to the most sauguine expectations of its proprietors.

From its large circulation, and from its size which makes advertisements much more conspicuous than they can be in the large papers, THE DAILY PARSoffers the most valuable advertising medium in this city. Its advertising business has largely increased and its columns are a respectable exhibit of the business and enterprise of the city. Its columns are es pecially looked to for a large class of advertisements of Wants" and "For Sale," and for servants, etc. which almost invariably bring prompt answers. People who are out of employment, or who want help of any kind, can place their needs before thou sands of the laboring or employing classes by a twenty-five-cont advertisement in THE DAILY PRESS. THE DAILY PRESS has also a larger circulation in Covington and Newport than the aggregate of all the other Cincinnati papers.

Business men in Cincinnati can in no way increas their business so easily and certainly as by advertis ing in this paper.

Routes can be easily cetablished for the DAIL Pass in any of the towns within a day's dis tance of Cinefrnati by railroad, and carriers will find that a little energy and labor will build up routes which will be valuable to them; and the great num ber of a one-cont paper that can be distributed in al most any town, will furnish a handsome income to the
